Dallas, TX – The VideoFest has kicked-off its CALL FOR ENTRIES and hunt for cutting-edge work for its 22nd celebration of video and electronic media. The 22nd Annual VideoFest will be held at the Angelika Film Center Nov.5-8, 2009. It is the oldest and largest video festival in the nation and continues to exhibit a diverse range of works by regional, national and international video artists.

Since 1986 The Dallas Video Festival has specialized in fiercely independent, imaginative, unusual, provocative and sometimes description-defying electronic media. In fact, we're the oldest and the largest video festival in the nation. In our 22 year history, we've screened or hosted over 4,000 different programs ranging from imaginative 30-second television commercials to mesmerizing video art, compelling documentaries, surrealistic animation, innovative digital features, intelligent, kid-friendly fare, thought-provoking panels and narrative shorts that surprise, inspire and entertain.

If your entry will push some buttons, we want you to send it in right away!

There are no thematic or content restrictions. Categories include any style or genre – experimental, documentary, animation, music video, feature, multimedia. We are also accepting entries shot and finished in high definition video. Texas entries under 25 minutes are eligible for a special program called the Texas Show.

Additional festival rules and information can be located at www.videofest.org. Entry fees $20 and up. E-mail festival@videofest.org or call 214.428.8700 for more information.

Deadline for entries is August 3, 2009
Late entries can arrive by August 11, 2009 for an additional fee.
